REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

1. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

The terms "unmapping" or "demapping" (and variations thereof) are well known in the art of data processing system memories. However, the vast majority of prior art patents and papers and other references that used these terms were using the common definition -- removing data items from a map. Applicant's disclosure, on the other hand explicitly defines "unmapping" as removing the map itself from memory. Note Figure 5 or paragraphs [0057] and [0058] of applicant's disclosure. This limitation of the term distinguishes the claims from the prior art that taught only removing data items from a map, wherein the map continues to exist.

This is not to say that this feature was unknown. Removing a map altogether was known in the prior art. Note Koeppel, U.S. 2005/0015491, paragraph [0021], or Yokohama, U.S. 5,524,202, for example. However, neither of these references taught or suggested such "unmapping" in a peripheral device paired with a co-processor (i.e., dedicated processor, local processor, DSP, etc.) separate from a CPU, wherein a first request was necessary to allocate a first memory to the co-processor and a second request was necessary to create the physical-to-virtual map in the allocated memory to make it available to the CPU and wherein a specific unmapping request could remove the map (thus undoing the map of the second request) without necessarily de-allocating the memory from access by the co-processor.

With particular regard to the claims 23-27, these are product claims, and applicant has correctly incorporated the proper language necessary for such claims to be considered statutory, specifically, for claim 23, the rejection under 35 USC 101 has been overcome by the amendment filed on December 22, 2005, which is now limited to a tangible embodiment. For claim 27, the language "a computer readable medium encoded with driver program code" satisfies the requirement.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
